London
Business
School

Introduction from the Head of Career Centre

I am delighted to share that 92% of our 2025 Masters in Management (MiM) class secured an offer within three months of graduation — an impressive achievement in today's dynamic and highly competitive global job market.

Our graduates have demonstrated remarkable resilience and determination, securing roles across more than 150 employers worldwide, reflecting both the versatility of the MiM skill set and the strong demand from organisations seeking graduates who combine analytical insight, broad business acumen, and practical, applied skills.

The MiM remains a truly international programme, and the global perspectives our students gain play a significant role in shaping their career ambitions and opportunities. At the same time, London remains central to the MiM experience, with more than half of our graduates choosing to begin their careers in the UK, reflecting the city's position as one of the world's leading business hubs.

Our unwavering commitment to supporting students throughout an evolving and competitive recruitment cycle is reflected in the extensive career support delivered over the past year. Through more than 230 workshops, 1,650 job opportunities shared and over 3,100 one-to-one coaching sessions, our Career Centre has worked closely with students to help them navigate the market and pursue their ambitions with confidence.

We are incredibly proud of the impact our graduates are already making across industries and geographies, and we look forward to following their journeys and celebrating their continued success in the years ahead.

Zoe McLoughlin
Executive Director

“The Career Centre was a constant source of support throughout my time at London Business School and well beyond graduation. From CV reviews and interview preparation to guidance from MBA mentors during case preparation, I always felt prepared to put my best foot forward. What made the biggest difference were the ongoing conversations with career mentors who truly understood how my goals were evolving and supported me not just strategically, but personally too.”

“Being part of a university with such a strong alumni network meant I could learn directly from people in roles I aspired to — understanding their decisions, challenges and trade-offs made my own path feel far more tangible. At the same time, coming from a technical and investment-focused background, the MiM gave me the space to strengthen my leadership, people and project management skills. It was a safe environment to practise negotiation and deliver impactful presentations, which has made me far more confident communicating complex ideas.”

“The MiM programme is designed to support you well beyond the classroom, and provides a long-term support system to navigate your career path every step of the way. As a student, I received extensive guidance during the consulting recruitment process. Since graduating, the alumni network remains a meaningful part of my professional life, particularly through regular events in London. The School fosters a genuine sense of community that continues well after the programme ends.”
